Angela Adams

This loyal Mainer's wanderings took her through gardens, into the woods, and onto state beaches.

The resulting Pathways collection plots impressions from that journey.

The Stream runner is an aqueous mélange of flowing clear colors and soft, circular "stones," all rendered in dusky shades of slate blue and purple haze, midnight and dark heather. Adams's low-pile rugs, handmade in India of pure tufted New Zealand wool, come in one standard 3-by-8-foot size or any custom dimensions. 800-255-9454; angelaadams.com. circle 571

Eskayel

Influential Italian photographer Carla de Benedetti rocketed to prominence in the 1970s with her shots of adventurous interiors by the likes of Joe Colombo. To create the new Jenu Mats collection, Brooklyn-based designer Shanan

Campanaro referred to those futuristic photos along with images from such dystopian cinematic milestones as Blade Runner. Each low-profile mat is a floor-hugging 18 by 27 inches, with a microfiber face and skid-resistant rubber backing. Bonus: The pieces are machine washable and flame resistant. 858-531-9034; eskayel.com. circle 572

Paola Lenti

Although the process mirrors the coiled construction of traditional rag rugs, the inspired spiral carpets of the Natural collection are nothing less than a high-tech take on tradition. This adventurous Italian manufacturer's in-house R&D team has spun a round rug using wool cording with a touch of polyamide. Versions with diameters of 78, 99, and 118 inches are offered in a selection of 10 signature Lenti colors. 39-0362-344587; paolalenti.com. circle 573

Gan by Gandia Blasco

In her role as graphic designer, Valencia-based Sandra Figuerola was key in reformatting this former blanket maker into a slick contemporary furnishings company. Now, in her other life creating products, Figuerola is responsible for some of the company's most remarkable textiles. Wovens, embroidery, and knotted techniques intermingle in her Glaoui rugs.

Antique North African nomadic examples may have provided the creative spark, but the line comes in decidedly modern standard sizes, in any of four color combinations. 858-531-9034; ganrugs.com. circle 576

DP Studio USA

They're shooting stars, that's what they are. Caelum—Latin for chisel—is a faint constellation that shines in the southern sky. Designer Diane Paparo borrowed the concept for her ethereal new hand-knotted contemporary runner, Caelum, made in Nepal from top-quality wool blended with up to 50 percent silk by men who take their traditional craft seriously. Three standard sizes are available in a total of six color schemes, including stone, jasper, and ametrine. 212-308-9019; dpstudioua.com. circle 575

ABC Carpet & Home

The novel designs from the brilliant minds at New York's venerable furnishings retailer may not seem nerdy, but the result is pretty, um, stellar. The in-house creative team went far-out with their Supernova 2 carpet, whose energetic pattern was influenced by nuclear fusion and fiery explosions deep in outer space. The 6-by-9-foot multicolored carpet was crafted in India using hand-spun silk. 212-674-1144; abchome.com. circle 574 ➤
